Investment style: Value

Aberforth are value investors who buy shares in companies that they calculate to be selling below their intrinsic value. This is determined through detailed financial and industrial analysis, combined with a valuation approach that focuses on both stockmarket and corporate worth.

Investment commentary

After a weak August, equities rallied amid easing fears over trade war escalation. The NSCI (XIC) returned 2.3%, which lagged the FTSE All-Share's 3.0%; sterling's strength was more helpful for larger companies. The Fund's return was 4.8%.

September witnessed a momentum reversal in stockmarkets around the world, as the winners in the earlier part of the year faltered and the erstwhile laggards performed better. The value investment style benefited from this phenomenon, though, among UK small caps, value's fortunes had started to improve early in the third quarter. This has helped the fund to offset the impact of the Woodford saga on less liquid asset classes. The Fund's continued bias towards the NSCI (XIC)'s "smaller small" companies, while hindering recent performance, contributes to extreme portfolio valuations: the Aberforth standard value portfolio's PE has never been lower relative to the NSCI (XIC)'s in its 29-year history.

Turning to stocks, there was further evidence of the uptick in corporate activity noted in previous commentaries. This benefited industrial textile manufacturer Low & Bonar, which responded to a takeover bid from German competitor Freudenberg. Rank, a gambling company, was buoyed by the UK Gaming Commission clearing its offer for Stride Gaming. Elsewhere, International Personal Finance reversed some of the previous month's poor performance and Vitec, the photography supplier, rallied having reported in line results during August. In terms of detractors, Keller is the only one worthy of mention. The specialist contractor's share price was affected by a lacklustre trading update.

Gearing

The Fund's Ord shares are geared by the capital entitlement of the ZDP shares which will rise continuously until the planned winding up date of 1 July 2024. The net gearing figure shown in the Key Fund information section is the percentage by which the total value of investments exceeds the total net assets.

Hurdle rates & redemption yields

The Fund's latest hurdle rates and redemption yields are available from the AIC website at www.theaic.co.uk; select Statistics, then ZDP Analytics.

Data sources & calculations

All data supplied by Aberforth, except NSCI (XIC) data (from Numis/Paul Marsh and Elroy Dimson – London Business School) and FTSE data (from FTSE International Limited).

Performance returns are total returns after all expenses and assume reinvestment of dividends. Yield is based on the Fund's trailing 12 months' dividends (excluding Specials). Active share is a measure of how the Fund's portfolio differs from the NSCI (XIC). Small companies are represented by the NSCI (XIC). Large companies are represented by the FTAS.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the dividends and returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the Main Market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.

The Fund's Ordinary shares (Ords) are geared by the Zero Dividend Preference shares (ZDPs) and rank for repayment of capital after the ZDPs and any creditors of the Fund. A positive net asset value for the Ords will be dependent upon the Fund's assets being sufficient to meet the prior capital entitlements of the holders of the ZDPs. The Ords should therefore be regarded as carrying above average risk. The ZDPs are not a protected or guaranteed investment. In particular, should the Fund be wound up prior to its planned winding up date, holders of ZDPs would only receive their accrued capital entitlement to the date of winding up - which would be less than the final anticipated capital entitlement of the ZDPs.
