Investment style: Value

Aberforth are value investors who buy shares in companies that they calculate to be selling below their intrinsic value. This is determined through detailed financial and industrial analysis, combined with a valuation approach that focuses on both stockmarket and corporate worth.

Investment performance

In accordance with the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), investment performance information will be shown here once the Fund has a full 12-month period of performance history.

Monthly investment commentary: February

FCA rules restrict the description of investment performance in the first twelve months of a fund's life.

As markets digested the Trump administration's plans, equities were mixed in February. The US and Japanese markets fell sharply into the month end, while European equities were stronger. Within the UK, size was a significant influence on performance. The large cap FTSE 100 index rose by 2%, while the mid cap FTSE 250 fell by 2.9% and the small cap DNSCI (XIC) fell 4.1%. Smaller companies tend to be more reliant on the domestic economy, where conditions and forecasts remain insipid in the wake of the Budget. As was the case in January, the Fund suffered from its relatively high exposure to the "smaller small" within the DNSCI (XIC).

The main detractor from the Fund's performance was Morgan Advanced Materials. The company warned about weaker trading for 2025 as industrial markets deteriorate. It also signalled a slowdown in capital expenditure on new capacity to serve the power semiconductor market, which has previously been signalled as an exciting growth area for the business. Speedy Hire's warning reflected weak hire demand amid uncertain construction markets. Results from Conduit Holdings revealed higher than expected insurance losses from its exposure to the LA wildfires. Wilmington was also weak following the release of its interim results. These were good overall but showed slowing growth in the US healthcare sector.

Bakkavor was the strongest contributor to performance. It rallied through the month as the market digested a positive January trading update that had reiterated progress toward the company's operating margin target. Other good performers for the Fund included Energean, Hansard Global, Brooks Macdonald and International Personal Finance.

Gearing

The Fund's Ord shares are geared by the capital entitlement of the ZDP shares which will rise continuously until the planned winding up date of 30 June 2031. The net gearing figure shown in the Key Fund information section is the percentage by which the total value of investments exceeds the total net assets.

Data sources & calculations

All data supplied by Aberforth, except DNSCI (XIC) data (from Deutsche Numis/Paul Marsh and Elroy Dimson – London Business School) and FTSE data (from FTSE International Limited).

Performance returns are total returns after all expenses and assume reinvestment of dividends. Yield is based on the Fund's trailing 12 months' dividends (excluding Specials). Active share is a measure of how the Fund's portfolio differs from the DNSCI (XIC). Small companies are represented by the DNSCI (XIC). Large companies are represented by the FTAS.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the dividends and returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the Main Market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.

The Fund's Ordinary shares (Ords) are geared by the Zero Dividend Preference shares (ZDPs) and rank for repayment of capital after the ZDPs and any creditors of the Fund. A positive net asset value for the Ords will be dependent upon the Fund's assets being sufficient to meet the prior capital entitlements of the holders of the ZDPs. The Ords should therefore be regarded as carrying above average risk. The ZDPs are not a protected or guaranteed investment. In particular, should the Fund be wound up prior to its planned winding up date, holders of ZDPs would only receive their accrued capital entitlement to the date of winding up - which would be less than the final anticipated capital entitlement of the ZDPs.
